The first of its kind in Australia, the conference aims to bring together academics, practitioners and LGBTIQ+ people seeking asylum and refugees to discuss pertinent issues of queer forced displacement and foster dialogue between official and unofficial groups invested in research and practice for coordinated solutions and better support of affected populations.

The topics to be discussed but not limited to include policy, advocacy and activism, queer forced displacement and the law, queer and refugee health in the forced displacement, social welfare and wellbeing, questions of identities, communities and belonging, trauma and testimony, intersectionality, art, history and heritage, and many others.

We invite participation from diverse audiences and sectors for the improvement of the situation of LGBTIQ people seeking asylum and refugees. LGBTIQ people with the lived experience are particularly encouraged to attend (a limited amount of financial support will be available to facilitate participation).

Deadline for proposals is 1 September 2019.
